The global gelatin market was valued at US$ 2540.70 Mn in 2020 growing at a CAGR of 7.2% over the forecast period (2022 – 2030). The study analyses the market in terms of revenue across all the major regions, which have been bifurcated into countries.

Gelatin is manufactured from partial hydrolysis from collagen, which is procured from animal sources including porcine, bovine, poultry and fish. The product is commercially available in capsules, sheet and powder form. High consumption of gelatin in food & beverage owing to its excellent stabilizing, and gelling properties drove the demand of gelatin market in the past. China and India being largest Asian giants in food & beverage sector faced short term impacts amid covid. According to Multidisciplinary Digital Publishing Institute (MDPI), Chinese and Indian food & beverage consumer goods subsector accounts for 18.31% and 27.97% respectively. Growth in such shares can be attributed to increasing product demand in confectioneries, bakery products and ice-creams. Also, reopening of venues such as restaurants, hotels, food & drinking places, etc. post COVID-19 is projected to drive the gelatin market growth over the forecast period.

Although, Europe and North America is projected to dominate the gelatin market on account of high consumption from end-use industries, . the demand for gelatin is expected to increase in Middle Eastern countries with vaccination drive. Pork-derived gelatin is widely used as stabilizer in vaccines, to ensure its safety and effectiveness during transport and storage. On account of uncertainty pertaining to vaccine use with concerns regarding permissibility under Islamic law influenced the demand of pork derived gelatin for short term. However, latter approval of such vaccine from UAE Fatwa Council is propelling the regional market growth.
