Florida Injury Lawyers Honor and Celebrate Women's History Month

Miami-Dade Chapter of the Florida Association for Women Lawyers (MDFAWL) is a voluntary bar association dedicated to promoting the advancement of women in the legal profession. MDFAWL advocates in support of women's rights and works to advance leadership opportunities for its members across the state of Florida.

SteinLaw's central mission has been to help real people. For too long, women have struggled to receive the same treatment, recognition and compensation as their male counterparts.

SteinLaw is demonstrating its support for women in the legal industry with this donation. The commitment to client service by SteinLaw's staff, the majority of whom are women, is a daily practice.

According to founder Brandon Stein, “SteinLaw's central mission has been to help real people. For too long, women have struggled to receive the same treatment, recognition and compensation as their male counterparts.”

“Good representation makes a difference,” Stein continued, “not just in legal issues, but in the world at large. Our support of MDFAWL demonstrates that SteinLaw is dedicated to ensuring the contributions of women in the legal industry remain visible and well supported.”

SteinLaw's donation coincides with Women's History Month, celebrated annually in March.

Women's History Month was instituted in the United States 35 years ago after educational nonprofit organization National Women's History Project lobbied the legislature. Official recognition of women's vast contributions to history became part of the legislative record when a Joint Resolution of the 100th Congress approved Public Law 100-9 on March 12, 1987.

Today, the National Women's History Alliance (NWhA), an expansion of the National Women's History Project, continues the mission to promote women's history and further the goals of education, empowerment, equality and inclusion.
