

Leading Indicator Links AgileBrain to Strengths, Interests, Values, and Big 5 Personality Traits

LIS' proprietary AgileBrain emotionalmotivational assessment tool is now bridged to all the major human capital assessments, supporting side-by-side usage.

BOSTON, MA, USA, June 1, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- By bridging Leading Indicator Systems' (LIS) proprietary AgileBrain, a neuroscience-based emotional-motivational measurement technology, to the major coaching and human capital assessment tools, a window has now been opened into the motivational state of executives, employees, and coachees.

Unlike static personality trait or strength measures, AgileBrain accurately measures one's emotional needs as they evolve and change over time. AgileBrain is highly flexible and can be targeted at any specific situation, whether it involves growth, conflict, teaming, transitions - whatever the relevant issue at hand.

"By bringing a dynamic emotional and motivational perspective, we can breathe life into the static, unchanging typologies that have traditionally dominated the human capital assessment market," explains John Penrose, CEO at Leading Indicator Systems. "Static systems, such as CliftonStrengths, Myers-Briggs, Enneagram, and DiSC, definitely have their utility in assessing different types of people, but by combining these assessments with AgileBrain, we now have a window into the
