Specifically, some top dates ideas for Australian singles that are not just dinner and a movie include:

1. Long Walks in the Park - Singles lucky enough to live in a place with gorgeous and large outdoor spaces can take advantage of the colorful scenery and fresh air by inviting their date for a walk and some exercise. The date can last as long as people want to keep strolling along, and foods or drinks, like coffee, can easily be incorporated into the date.

2. Browsing a Bookstore - Books are the ultimate conversation starters, and browsing a bookstore can be quite the date. While browsing, people have tons to chat about, including reading habits, favorite authors, best genres, top books of all time, and so much more.

3. Taking a Cooking Class – Taking a cooking class is a fun way to work together to create a tasty meal. Learn some new skills in the kitchen, work as a team with a date, and cook the night away, perhaps with some sips of wine in between.

4. Planning a Day Trip – Planning a day trip is a great way to get to know someone in a more serious and intimate way. Head out of town for a local beach trip, for example, and enjoy personal one-on-one time that allows for adventure, deep conversations, and fun-filled moments.

5. Going Skating or Apple Picking - Specific activities, like skating and apple picking, are fun date limited-edition date ideas. Build fun date memories, take photos, and experience the outdoors together to truly test your compatibility.

These are just five possible date ideas for Australian singles, which should help those looking to plan fun, engaging date activities do so more easily. Any of these activities facilitates conversation, quality time, and special moments in which people can get to know potential romantic partners more intensively and intimately.
