Today Sir Hemp Co. announces that it will start the process of becoming USDA NOP (National Organic Program) Certified. This will solidify the company as a true CBD seed-to-sale company, and it’s continued mission of crafting ‘CBD The Right Way’. The company already uses only natural organic ingredients. This process will be to certify the usage and allow it to market under ‘USDA Organic’. “This certification process is very involved with a substantial audit trail to ensure full compliance, no rock is

The National Organic Program is a federal regulatory program that according to the USDA develops and enforces consistent national standards for organically produced agricultural products. This will allow the company to utilize the USDA Organic Seal in all its CBD goods. Being organic is non-GMO and more. Sir Hemp will be inspected and audited yearly to make sure that they are implementing the rules correctly, this will include residue testing program to verify that prohibited pesticides are not being applied to organic crops and robust compliance and enforcement activities. The entire USDA Organic Certification process should be completed by May 2022. Expect to see updates on Sir Hemp's website and local nutritional stores.
