

"No-fault" online divorce specialist creates new service ahead of March 31st deadline

As the deadline looms ahead of changes to Britain's divorce laws, one online divorce specialist is offering a free service to help couples through the process.

NEWQUAY, CORNWALL, UK, March 30, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- As the deadline looms ahead of changes to Britain's divorce laws, one online specialist is offering a free service to help couples through the process as smoothly as possible.

The screenshot shows the 'EASY ONLINE DIVORCE' logo at the top left. Below it, a headline asks 'Is a simple, no-fault divorce right for you? Find out in 50 seconds.' and encourages taking a test to save £250. A small text block explains that bad news is that some law firms charge up to £250 for a consultation, but good news is that they are not 'SOME' law firms. It states they've designed the test to show the best way to approach divorce and how to protect oneself financially, for free. Three bullet points highlight the benefits: it takes less than a minute, it's completely free, and results are instantly customized. A 'Start' button is prominently displayed. To the right of the text is a form titled 'Enter your details below to start the test' with fields for 'First name*', 'Last name*', and 'Email*', followed by the 'Start' button and a 'Privacy Policy' link. At the bottom of the screenshot, the text 'Take the FREE online divorce test' is visible.

It was previously thought the current system would run up to midnight on the 5th April before the new process starts on 6th April.

I see us as helping people move on to a new chapter in their lives and thankfully, the justice department has come round to this way of thinking, by making divorce easier with no fault divorce.”

However, HM Courts and Tribunal Service have announced that couples must apply under the current law by 4pm on 31st March 2022, or wait for the changes to come into force.

Applications for no-contest divorces have soared recently with more and more people turning to online services when their cases are relatively simple and amicable.

Twice published author on divorce and founder of

EasyOnlineDivorce.co.uk James Brien explains:

‘I see us very simply as helping people to move on to a new chapter in their lives and thankfully, the justice department has finally come round to this way of thinking, by making divorce easier with the introduction of no fault divorce.

‘Now, more people will be able to divorce without using a solicitor and as you can expect, the traditional law firms are a tad concerned to put it mildly!

'They will warn you of the risks of doing it yourself (there are some) especially about not having financial protection. So, here at EasyOnlineDivorce, we provide consent orders and explain the risks in a FREE consultation.

"We've also developed a really quick test that will take under a minute to complete and will ensure that you have all of your ducks in a row before you speak to a divorce specialist, whether that is us or anyone else for that matter.'

'We are not pro-divorce or anti-marriage. We're simply passionate about making the best of our short time on this beautiful planet and having the freedom to live life on your terms.
