/EINPresswire.com/ -- Author Timothy J. Lemucchi

published his book titled The Williams Brothers: Missouri to California by Horseback in 1843: A Great-Great Grandson’s Perspective. The book was made with the help of the author’s grandmother, Clara Engle Williams, who lived to be 102- years-old, was a member of an early California pioneer family herself, and was married to James Floyd Williams, the grandson of one of the heroes of this book, James Williams. In May of 1843, James Williams, John Williams, Isaac Williams, and Squire Williams decided to leave their vast 640-acre home in Cape Girardeu, Missouri, and ride their horses to Captain JohnSutter’s Fort on the Sacramento River in California. With excerpts from personal journals of the Williams brothers, we get a personal and first-hand look at the hardships and hazards that the Williams brothers endured on this lengthy trip. “For a Good Read! Adventures of Early Pioneers (William Brothers) making their way to California from Missouri before the Goldrush.”— Amazon Customer Review.
