High demand for additional supplements

VANCOUVER, BC, CANADA, April 5, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Read This Report to Find out Total Addressable Market for Dietary Supplements Industry

The global dietary supplements market size reached USD 145.4 Billion in 2021 and is expected to register a revenue CAGR of 7.5% during the forecast period, according to latest analysis by Emergen Research.

Increasing demand for vegan products and rising prevalence of obesity and diabetes globally are factors expected to support market revenue growth between 2021 and 2030.

The growing trend of veganism is driving demand for plant-based dietary supplement products, which is expected to boost revenue growth of the market during the forecast period. Plants have certain essential nutrients that are found in animal-based products. Phytochemicals, antioxidants, vitamins, and minerals present in plants can help to keep human cells healthy, along with balancing the immune system. A healthy immune system is essential for reducing risks of diseases such as cancer as the system can recognize and attack mutations in cells before they can progress to disease. Furthermore, prolonged inflammation can damage tissues that can cause cancer and other inflammatory diseases, including arthritis, and plant-based dietary supplements can prevent these diseases and help to protect cells in the human body from damage and aging.
