Synthetic Meat Brings All Types Of New marketing Opportunities

Reach These Active Buyers Today

Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Marketing was the brainchild of a disabled veteran. Once the obligations of military service had been completed, it was decided to shift from focusing on defense to growth, specifically the economy. This would be done by helping businesses to help themselves in finding clients and customers essential to development. That concept went into action with a small start-up, and today that start-up has grown into a business with a staff that has a combined total of over fifty years of industry experience in marketing.

Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Marketing entered the marketing industry just before a period of paradigm shift. Traditional marketing techniques like radio commercials did the heavy lifting, but the up-and-comer, digital marketing, was already blazing trails that were getting attention. The company focused on direct mail, a decision that yielded major dividends by imparting crucial skills in management, analytics, data acquisition.

When digital marketing proved its worth as a new platform, Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Marketing was already positioned to integrate it into its services. The early mover advantage this provided brought significant gains for both the company and the clients it served.

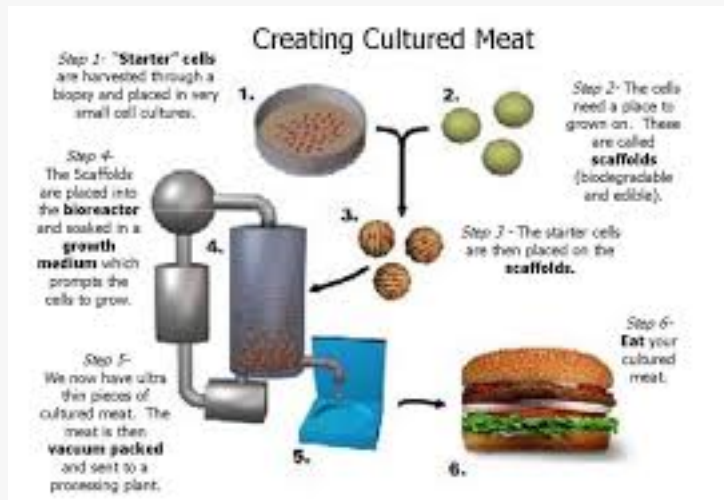

Today, Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Marketing has greatly expanded its range far beyond its initial service area of just the hometown of Las Vegas, Nevada. The entire United States is served, including Alaska and Hawaii. Businesses ready to cross borders can access all of North America, with databases for the markets in Canada and Mexico. For companies ready to go international, it's possible to cross the Atlantic and use databases for European markets.

Meat Substitutes Are Evolving

In the past, the adoption of meat substitutes has been slow due to considerable challenges. Meat substitutes could be more expensive than the real thing, have a different texture, and taste very different, sometimes unpleasant. Despite the real environmental, health, and even economic benefits of eating less meat and switching over to meat substitutes, it was challenging to do so easily.

Today, this is no longer the case. Strides have been made in both plant-based substitutes and the pioneering techniques in cloning technology to synthesize real meat in a lab setting, rather than the long time interval and significant expense of raising and feeding livestock for its meat. New plant-based substitutes are now closer in taste and texture to real meat, with prices coming down, while lab-created substitutes are currently undergoing trial evaluations in countries like Singapore, where the willingness to experiment with new culinary creations is more commonplace before going into widespread sale and distribution.

Because of this and the continuing appreciation for helping combat climate change by readjusting lifestyles and land use, synthetic meat and its supporters and advocates are gaining more ground. This has also created a noticeable tangent in hobbies, interests, and purchasing choices for people interested in supporting and advocating for synthetic meat sale and consumption. An emerging marketing demographic is forming with common purchasing traits, and businesses that want to tap into environmentally minded markets now have another venue.
