There has been increasing awareness regarding latest market trends among shoppers. For instance, consumers opt for products which are made from high quality materials. This, in turn, has led to rise in demand for high quality products, which is expected to drive the market growth in the near future.

Moreover, consumers are rapidly aligning towards latest designs and innovative leather offerings in order to match with changing fashion trends. Owing to rising demand for leather garments and footwear, the leather goods industry is witnessing growth in emerging economies.

In several countries across the globe, there is higher preference for quality and standardization among consumers. As a result, leather manufacturers offer sustainable products by avoiding use of harmful chemicals and dyes. India is one of the largest exporters of leather garments, leather goods, and also one of the largest producers of leather footwear.
