

Zepp Health Commends University of Hartford Public Safety Officer

HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT, USA, April 11, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- A world-leading smart wearable brand, Zepp Health (NYSE: ZEPP), commends a University of Hartford Public Safety Officer for his bravery during an unusual morning altercation at the entrance to the suburban campus.

The incident, an apparent case of road rage that began off campus, was captured on the University's security footage. After confronting another driver and recklessly driving around the busy entrance, the suspect attempted to flee the scene. Officer Thomas Halsey attempted to intervene by blocking the suspect's vehicle and reaching into his open window. In the process, he suffered minor injuries and his smartwatch broken from his wrist. Unfortunately, the suspect remains on the run and anybody with a tip is encouraged to contact the University of Hartford's Department of Public Safety.

Zepp Health is grateful to have a loyal customer like Officer Thomas Halsey, who brings 20+ years of service and extensive experience in public safety, campus security, community policing and emergency management to University of Hartford. The company was honored to replace his watch as personal thank you to him for his service to his community.
