

Five Star Restoration Reveals Important Home Safety Tips for 2022

RIVERSIDE, CALIFORNIA, USA, April 12, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Notable Inland Empire home restoration company, Five Star Restorations, offers curious homeowners some of the most essential home safety tips. Not only that, but the California restoration company also outlines tips on the best way to protect homes, too.

We want to make sure we are recommending what is code. We follow the CRC to the letter and make sure our clients are up to date on all the facts. In short, we recommend what's code; nothing less,”

Nick Smuts

Five Star Restoration started in 2016 and emphasized a casual, down-to-earth approach towards repairing and restoring homes.

With a crew of experienced professionals with vast experience in home repair and reconstruction in Southern California, local homeowners can breathe a sigh of relief knowing that the Five Star Restoration team is committed to protecting their homes.

With all this dedication towards keeping people safe and secure, Five Star Restoration felt it was the best time to share some key home safety tips for the beginning of 2022 (and beyond).

Home Safety Tips

Found in the company's blog, the article on home safety tips is right at home with other home improvement topics to help home owners get peace of mind. For example, the company deals in effective mold removal, post-fire cleanup, and more.

Going Up In Smoke

It's no surprise that one of the most crucial home safety tips is preparing for potential fire damage and smoke hazards. As such, this home safety tip dominates the top of the list.

Fires in the home are a terrifying prospect for any homeowner. However, if one is adequately prepared with new smoke detectors, they give themselves a much-needed edge in terms of safety.

“The best way to get the most out of smoke and fire alarms in your home is to install one on each floor. Mainly focus on sleeping areas and bedrooms. Place them on the ceiling in these areas. Being safe is the number one priority.”

If a homeowner prepares their home this way, they should be good to go. They have a fantastic contingency plan against fire and smoke damage.

However, Five Star gives us a glimpse into preparing further with interconnected fire alarms.

“There are even interconnected fire alarms that alert the homeowner that smoke is present on a different floor or section of the house. [Having multiple alarms on different floors] is crucial to getting out of the house if a fire is present.”

Five Star Restoration’s dedication to safety, preparedness, and the wellbeing of one’s family come through loud and clear in its informative pages. And for many homeowners, it’s a breath of fresh air.

Carbon Monoxide, Too

Carbon monoxide (CO) is a silent killer. That’s why installing a CO detector in the home is so crucial, along with smoke detectors. In fact, some smoke detectors come with a built-in CO detector, covering all bases.

Business development officer Nick Smuts also emphasizes Five Star Restoration’s dedication to keeping everything up to code, too. “When we recommend something like a CO detector, we have rigorous standards to go by. When we install CO detectors or inform customers about the dangers of the odorless gas, we always want to educate.”

Keeping Things Up To Code With CO Detectors

Five Star Restoration uses the National Fire Protection Association guidelines to help guide both customers and the business.

The 2016 California Residential Code (CRC) helps Five Star Restoration serve its customers better. The CRC outlines the legal requirements for each installation and inspection criteria for a home and its owners.

There are various standards to follow for optimal safety for home owners and their family with CO alarms. For example, these detectors need installation in centralized locales within the home, ideally near sleeping areas and every floor. Interconnecting these multiple alarms on each floor is a surefire way to keep them and their family safe. And Five Star Restoration follows the CO code to ensure their clients make the right (and safe) choices.

"We want to make sure we are recommending what is code. We follow the CRC to the letter and make sure our clients are up to date on all the facts. In short, we recommend what's code; nothing less," says Smuts.

Looking For Mold In All The Wrong Places

Mold is an ever-present aspect of homes and businesses. Unfortunately, mold spores are everywhere. But it's only when a mold spore makes contact with a damp surface that it transforms into the unsightly, unhealthy form we hope we never find.

That's why Five Star Restoration's mold removal services in the Inland Empire are essential when keeping the home safe for the people.

Mold remediation is the perfect solution for this homeowners' nuisance.

There are no unnecessary consulting fees or hidden charges. It's about finding the problem and working it out together if something's amiss. More importantly, for the company and its team, it's about keeping the community safe. Five Star goes on to explain the nuances behind evaluating possible mold growth.

"The only professionals who can declare mold are licensed hygienists. When we perform a mold inspection we are looking for obvious signs of growth and signs of long-term water damage. If you feel mold may be of concern, Five Star Restoration can provide a visual inspection or evaluation."

But while the Southern California restoration company can't technically diagnose a mold problem in the home, that doesn't stop them from evaluating their client's home and helping them with mold remediation when the time comes.

In another article in its blog section, Five Star Restoration further explains the general mold removal process and what it looks like with the company.

"Our mold removal experts come to your home and get things squared away in no time. Call Five Star to schedule your evaluation to see how serious your mold problem is."

"We'll clue you into any health issues the mold can cause, along with locating the possible source of moisture feeding the mold spores. That's the key to removing mold: finding the food source and eliminating it.

The home restoration company dedicates itself to assisting and helping home and business owners with their issues, serving as an invaluable resource who want honest, accurate, and down-to-earth customer service.

We do a comprehensive and complete cleaning, followed by drying out the household for a few days. Afterward, the mold problem is a thing of the past. The before and after pictures will be a beauty to behold.”

With that mold out of the way, homeowners can (figuratively and literally) breathe easier knowing they and their family are safe.

Disaster Preparation

Whether it's wildfires sweeping through Southern California, tsunamis, floods, or even man-made unrest, homeowners can still protect their home.

With Five Star Restoration's board-up services, the Inland Empire restoration company gives home and business owners the perfect opportunity to cover their bases, both physically and financially.

For example, the team at Five Star Restoration will come to their home or business, help prepare it for a coming disaster, and help them deal with anything after the smoke clears.

Not only is this a surefire way to prevent further property damage, but it makes dealing with insurance companies a lot easier since you've 'exercised due diligence on your end,' according to the company.
