The trial enrolled 547 patients with mild-to-moderate appearance of atopic dermatitis and moderate-to-severe itch. The trial met all primary and secondary endpoints, showing that B244 significantly reduced itch, reduced overall disease severity, improved skin clearance, and improved health-related quality of life measures at 4 weeks compared to placebo.

Their findings:

- B244 reduced patients' WI-NRS score by an average of 34.3% and achieved clinically meaningful 4-point itch response
- Lesional severity (appearance) improved for IGA and EASI
- Results were achieved in 4 weeks
- Safe and well tolerated with no SAEs and no single adverse event occurred in greater than 1% of the active group.
