The most precious and expensive of all gemstones, diamond is known for its evergreen, eternal beauty. It is hardest natural mineral found on earth and is often referred to as 'king of all precious stones.' High-grade diamonds are a symbol of true elegance, and these dainty stones add a touch of extraordinary beauty to every piece of jewelry that they are embedded into. Major attributes of diamond such as hardness and high dispersion of light (its characteristic 'fire') make it one of the world's most sought-after gemstones.

Key factors contributing to robust revenue growth of the global diamond jewelry market include rising demand for diamond jewelry (including diamond rings, pendants, necklaces, bracelets, bangles, earrings, and dangles), growing acceptance of diamond jewelry such as diamond-studded chains, cufflinks, tie pins, signet rings, and cartography necklaces among men, introduction of new and exclusive diamond jewelry designs, technological advances in jewelry designing techniques, emerging jewelry & fashion trends, surge in demand during wedding seasons, and rising expenditure on bridal jewelry.
