It is huge news for the sock industry because compression socks are plain and straightforward most of the time. Businesses can use these specific socks to build brand awareness with the latest innovation. People wear these socks for extra comfort, to prevent severe medical conditions, and to do better in sports.

Their VP of production, Thea Chu, said, "today, we are adding yet another feather to our innovative manufacturing." "With the addition of custom artwork on compression socks, we are opening whole new avenues for businesses, organizations, and people." "Businesses or organizations involved in health care, sports, or raising awareness about feet issues can design high-quality custom compression socks with their logo, design, and texts," they added.

"EverLighten team is guided by the principle of helping customers manufacturer high-quality products according to their requirements," they added. "In a market already saturated with various products, it is challenging to find gaps, but our research team was able to accomplish it." "They found a need for compression socks with personalized artwork/ logo for organizations, non-profits, and groups." "Our scientifically designed compression socks help improve blood flow, lessening swelling and pain, improving many other feet problems." "Organizations were finding it challenging to get a reliable manufacturer of specialized socks with their logos." "Most manufacturers produce a low-quality print that gets blurred when stretched or washed." "We use the latest machines and the most innovative manufacturing technologies to produce high-quality print on our compression socks."
