UNITED KINGDOM, April 18, 2022

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Recently

Eurotech Cyber Security recovered $1.2 million in bitcoin for romance scam victim. Mr Cullins who lost $1.2 million bitcoin said he couldn't believe his luck after getting his money back.

Mr. Cullins After making what he thought was a good match on a dating app, from West Palm Beach lost $1.2 million of his life savings in a cryptocurrency scam.

As they conversed, he told her he had refinanced his house last year and had $30,000 he wanted to use on home improvements. She asked if he could spare $2,000, telling him she could show him how to trade in cryptocurrency. She told him he wouldn't have to work so much any longer and wouldn't have to worry about his house payments. She said she wanted to travel with him in the future.

"I have friends who do crypto and it all seemed legit," he said. He downloaded the app and went to the day trading site she provided. He learned later those sites were fake, but they were sophisticated and seemed real, he said.

The malware which was hidden in the trading software had been remotely installed on his system, and his $1.2 million in Bitcoin was gone. "I got in touch with a crypto recovery at specialist Eurotech." Mr. Cullins responded.

Over the next few weeks, Eurotech followed the blockchain to recover Mr. Cullins funds. Ultimately, Mr. Cullins was shocked and relieved to get his money back. "It was like winning the lottery. There was no chance to get it back, but we had to try, and I am so lucky to have the funds recovered" Mr. Cullins further said.

If clients believe they were a victim of a romance scam or crypto scam. They can take comfort in knowing that many people have recovered Bitcoin and other cryptocurrencies. Nothing is truly anonymous. A significant first step is to get in touch with Blackpooltech today.
