Market Trends and Drivers

The increasing occurrences of several lifestyle diseases, along with the inflating prices of healthcare services represents some of the key factors primarily driving the health insurance market growth across the UAE. Additionally, various private players are entering the market and providing several additional health benefits to clients, which is acting as another major growth-inducing factor. The market is also being catalyzed by rapid digitization in healthcare processes, which have enabled complete transparency amongst involved parties. Apart from this, the coronavirus disease (COVID-19) pandemic have prompted the different government bodies of the region to mandate the provision of health insurance to all its citizens to cover the expenses incurred during the treatment of the disease, which, in turn, is creating a positive outlook for the market.
