Reports And Data

Nurse call system is an advanced communication system that transmits signals to physicians and nurses based on patients' conditions and further determines whether or not a doctor is required. Nurse call systems efficiently assist in reducing a number of potential patient disruptions. As the process is inherently discrete, it leads to minimal disruptions in an organization. This further allows nurses to keep a record of their patients and establish communication on a daily basis.

However, various unfavorable factors may hamper market growth. High installation cost of the nurse call system and lack of skilled professionals are some key factors expected to restrain market revenue growth to a certain extent over the forecast period.
