announces plans for new locations

throughout the state. The company states that the facilities will specialize in outpatient treatment services, inpatient treatment services, and community-level outreach. The new facilities will staff peer recovery coaches, behavioral health technicians, mental health technicians, and licensed social workers and will be capable of performing assessments on site.

Our services are desperately needed in rural communities across the state and will serve to improve access to care.”

Community Relations*

Individual locations will be announced in the weeks to come after being finalized. Each location will offer the same quality of care found at the company's main campuses but will be able to emphasize outpatient services for patients who are appropriate for the level of care. Adding local outpatient options will provide flexibility to the company's treatment programs where patients can return to their local area after inpatient and continue to receive treatment as part of a clinical aftercare plan. The company states its goal is to provide greater access to services in the communities it has identified as being particularly underserved with either drug and alcohol rehab or mental health treatment facilities. "Our services are desperately needed in rural communities across the state and will serve to improve access to care." Said Jackie Daniels, VP of Community Relations.
