

Shepherd's Hill Academy Community Event Brings a Spirit of Collaboration

The informative event was host to local county chambers.

MARTIN, GA, UNITED STATES, April 20, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Last week, Shepherd's Hill Academy (SHA) provided the community with a free Chick-fil-A luncheon in collaboration with two other local organizations, Learning Tree Academy and Reins of Life.

Reins of Life is an equine therapeutic program with a mission to provide mental, physical, emotional, behavioral, and spiritual healing.

The event was organized by Learning Tree Academy, an all-inclusive educational and child care center for children birth to 3rd grade and hosted at the Family Event Pavillion on the Shepherd's Hill campus.

To see the full picture of the collaboration occurring among these organizations in Stephens County is inspiring. I am so glad to be a part of what God is doing through this team and community.”

Logan Harris, Director of Learning Tree Academy

The three organizations share a unified passion to provide care for families within the community. The trio is a wealth of resources for quality education and therapy, all of which was displayed throughout the luncheon. “I continue to be amazed by the hidden treasures in Stephens County,” stated one attendee. “It is so amazing to see how these three organizations are working together for a common goal.”

Logan Harris, Director of Learning Tree Academy, shared a brief overview and the mission of the center with community members. She spoke passionately about Learning Tree Academy's all-encompassing role in the lives of the children who attend and throughout the rest of the community. “To see the full picture of the collaboration occurring among these organizations in Stephens County is inspiring,” stated Logan Harris. “I am so glad to be a part of what God is doing through this team and community.”

According to Logan Harris, she and the entire Learning Tree Academy team aim to continue to support and collaborate with others in the community in an effort to improve quality of education and quality of life for families in the area.

Next on the event docket was a presentation by the founder of Reins of Life, Cheryl Harris. During her presentation, the Reins of Life mission and the 27-year history of the organization were both shared. Also included was a deeper dive into the various equine programs that are available to Stephens, Franklin, Hart, Banks and Habersham county residents. "I had no idea how many different kinds of people ROL (Reins of Life) serves," stated one observer. The presentation wrapped with an overview of the connection between Reins of Life and SHA, citing the therapeutic modality that horses serve for so many individuals in need.

As for the success of the event, community attendees and staff alike agreed the event was executed flawlessly, ultimately achieving the goal of spreading awareness regarding the resources available for all ages through the three collaborating organizations. "To me, the success of the event was in educating our community about our services," pointed out Joshua Wallace, Director of Operations at Shepherd's Hill Academy. "As a result it broadens our ability to serve families in need."
