

James Jensen's book '100 minutes with Osama Bin Laden' is a recollection of the author's encounter with Osama in 2001

IOWA CITY, USA, April 27, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- When people think of Iowa, it's usually seas of green with corn and soybean farms. It's definitely not Al-Qaeda accomplices in the Midwest. People, including the U.S. government, surely didn't imagine that in 2001, amidst the agricultural heartland, terrorists were scheming just off the interstate highways.

100 Minutes With Osama bin Laden describes a chance encounter with the Al-Qaeda leader and his henchman at a roadside convenience store on September 3rd, 2001. The store's owner, James Jensen, knew at once that these were not your typical gas and go customers. A week later when 9/11 hit, Jim was sure that this encounter was evidence of criminal activity. There was no turning back. That experience set him on a mission of discovery. This book is the first of a series in progress that explores the web of terrorism in the middle of America.

Read this gripping non-fiction account of Osama bin Laden with James Jensen 8 days prior to the 9/11 attacks in Iowa.

About James P Jensen

Raised by carpenters, pony shows, and fast-pitch softball crowds, this native Iowan ran into something he couldn't accomplish himself. With as much effort as I couldn't get done. To produce this story, which has to share with the world, would not have been possible without a ghostwriter, editor, and book cover artist. All extraordinary people who took on a very difficult assignment and made have a life of their own. Thank you Thank you (wanna know me....ask, I'll be around)
