sessions, and inspiring keynote virtual luncheons provided by dedicated sponsors. There will be a lineup of experts sharing their expertise, technical acumen, leadership, and practical operational solutions that will sharpen attendees' views of what is now a new reality in the world of treasury and financial services.

Nancy Wu leads sales and customer success for SkyStem in the United States. She has spent most of her career working with accounting professionals to streamline the close process, set up shared services centers, and has consulted for a number of years in business process improvement and technology implementation. She is the host of SkyStem's award-winning CPE webinar series and is also a contributor for CFO.University. In 2020, she authored "From Week to Days: Boarding the Mid-Market Financial Close Bullet Train" in partnership with IQPC.

Ms. Wu's thought leadership topic "Fraud Busters: Combat Fraud During Month-End Close" will discuss the risk of occupational fraud and how it continues to be on the rise. She'll examine some of the most effective, most used but least appreciated, fraud-oriented internal controls executed during month-end close. Ms. Wu will deconstruct the nature of their potency and how their effectiveness can be increased even more, as accounting professionals rely on them more than ever before.

“We are thrilled to share our platform and thought leadership initiatives with industry peers and prospects at the conference," said Shagun Malhotra, SkyStem Founder and CEO. "We look forward to demonstrating service excellence to the conference participants and dig deep into this topic."

The 2022 NEAFP Conference will be held May 2-4, 2022 and Nancy Wu's virtual thought leadership session will be held on May 4th from 3:30-4:30. Visit New England AFP to reserve your seat.
