A breast implant represents a prosthesis device that has a silicone outer shell stuffed with a blend of saline and silicone gel. It is extensively utilized in cosmetic surgery processes for enhancing and changing the size, shape, contour, etc., of the breast by replacing or removing tissues. Breast implant surgery involves incision, anesthesia, insertion, placement, and closing of the device with layered sutures or surgical tape in the breast tissue. Breast implants are commercially available in various variants, including silicone, saline, structured, gummy bear, round, textured, smooth, etc.
