Sport is a powerful tool for change. Again and again through history sport has led societal movements for inclusion and equity" Move United Executive Director Glenn Merry relevant education, awareness, and skills to lead the narrative that sport has the power to instill change. Historically, attendees have represented a variety of affiliations including Move United member organizations, general sport organizations, city parks & recreation departments, non-governing bodies, VA hospital staff, general hospital therapists, disability resource groups, and more. "Sport is a powerful tool for change. Again and again through history sport has led societal movements for inclusion and equity," said Move United Executive Director

Glenn Merry. "This year's theme reflects Move United's vision to challenge what's possible for athletes and America. After being virtual for two years, we are pleased to return to in-person in Colorado Springs, where so many sports organizations and the Paralympic movement are rooted." Highlights include an Opening Reception at the U.S. Olympic & Paralympic Museum, five preconference workshops, over 30 sessions supported by over 55 speakers, and a roundtable discussion around solving barriers to sport access. Other topics will address accessibility systems, adaptive equipment and technology, inclusive organizational infrastructure and social constructs to challenge ableistic culture. Speakers include industry professionals from all across the country, including Julie Dussliere from the United States Olympic and Paralympic Committee as well as athletes such as Ileana Rodriguez, Mary Allison Milford-Cook, Patty Cisneros Prevo, Stephanie Wheeler, and Christina Ripp Schwab.

The Education Conference is part of Move United's education program which has provided adaptive sports training to more than 6,000 people through over 350 events in the last two years alone. Move United Education promotes professional development for the adaptive sport industry through education and training. In the past year, Move United has committed over a half-million dollars to train hundreds of instructors and coaches around the country. Peer-topeer knowledge sharing is the cornerstone of Move United's education and training events and has shaped each leadership conference since 2009.

Attendees may be eligible to acquire continuing education credit. For more information about the conference or to register to attend, visit moveunitedsport.org/education/2022-move-united-education-conference.
