Sangoma is assisting StandUP Ukraine to mobilize its communications infrastructure by providing physical phones, mobile apps, phone lines and bandwidth needed to connect refugees with volunteers as well as sponsors and suppliers.

“We are proud to support this important humanitarian mission and extend our efforts to keep these families connected as they start on their journey to rebuild their lives,” said David S. Moore, CFO of Sangoma. “Access to communication is an essential part of this effort.”

StandUP Ukraine recently launched its Ukrainian Community Platform. The resource-rich platform is a digital hub that provides information to refugees about local services including identification of legal aid, healthcare, available temporary housing, transportation, and work opportunities. The platform also helps displaced Ukrainians find and reconnect with family and friends.

“Our goal is to provide Ukrainian families displaced by this devastating crisis with reliable information and services that will help them get their feet back on the ground in the immediate term,” said Gratia Ionescu, Executive Director of StandUP Ukraine and President and Founder of Women for Causes. “We are grateful to have a partner in Sangoma to help the refugees with critical communication resources that will help them connect not only to primary services but family and friends as well.”
