Crowd sourced, meme-like words of wisdom stand the test of time and illustrate contemporary culture in this series from LA artist Susan Spector.

Spector drew inspiration from a crowdsourced project during the pandemic lockdown where she received more than 100 responses from around the world answering the question "What is a phrase from your past that has stayed with you forever?" The resulting text-based work calls to mind the truisms of Jenny Holzer - informed and distilled by contemporary populism. This gathering of memorable phrases funneled through Spector's artistic interpretation illustrates the important ideas and values in our culture. While a departure from her usual abstract figures, this collection of entries continues Spector's interest in current cultural and social issues.

My medium is as varied as my subjects. Nothing is off limits. I am grateful just to be here now in the present and paint.”
