

Young Girls of South Central LA to be Celebrated Alongside Female Community Change Leaders at 17th Annual APCH Awards

Annual GirlPower! Awards celebrates the members of APCH and the women leaders who inspire them, while raising critical funds to support the organization.

LOS ANGELES, CA, USA, May 5, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/

-- WHAT:□

A Place Called Home \(APCH\), a nonprofit youth and community center providing a safe, nurturing environment for South Central youth and their families, will celebrate 29 years of service during its Annual GirlPower! Awards, which celebrates the organization's young female members and the women leaders who inspire them, while raising critical funds to support its programs and community services.

This year's luncheon celebration, expected to draw over 200 attendees, will amplify and spotlight historically marginalized voices, as well feature performances from the APCH youth dance company and youth band, and heartfelt testimonials from members impacted by APCH's work. Young members of APCH's GirlPower program will culminate their cohort's intensive work through a special performance art piece. A pre-luncheon boutique where attendees can shop for the perfect Mother's Day gift, while raising funds for APCH, will feature local artisans and small businesses.
