Lensmart Shares How to Pick the Right Contact Lens

Picking the right contact lens is an important decision that should often be taken with your eye doctor. In most cases, different factors determine the perfect choice of contact lens for you.

These factors include your tolerance level to contact lenses, your expectations, refractive error, and your willingness to maintain your lenses. Here are some tips from Lensmart on how to pick the right contact lens:

1. Frequency of use: How often you plan to wear contact lenses will determine your choice. Do you plan to wear it daily, on weekends, or special occasions? Soft contact lenses are often a great choice for people planning to wear them full-time or part-time. They are comfortable even for beginners.

2. The sharpness of Vision: If you want your contact lens to deliver sharp vision, then rigid gas permeable contact lenses are the best option. Although they take time to get used to, they work better if you need sharper vision, especially if you have a condition called astigmatism.

3. Required Maintenance: While disposable contacts will reduce your risk of getting eye infections, you need to daily care for your contacts to maintain the health of your eyes when wearing contact.

If you want to avoid the cleaning and disinfecting process that comes with contact lenses maintenance daily, you should choose daily disposable lenses. These one-day soft lenses can be discarded after a single-use.

4. Overnight Use: If you plan to wear your contact lenses overnight, you should choose lenses that allow high-quality oxygen to permeate through them.

These are some important tips to help you make an informed decision when choosing your contact lenses. You can explore Lensmart for a variety of designs and styles in May.
