The single has been released on the Nashville-based record label, Clinetel Records, managed and administered worldwide by Reel Muzik Werks in Los Angeles and Nashville. The project was produced by the legendary, Ted "Theo" Perlman, producer of hits with Whitney Houston, Bob Dylan, Chicago, Diana Ross, Burt Bacharach, Ringo Starr and Joe Cocker.

"Life is a gift and so are the words that come to me," Nashville hit songwriter, Lacie Carpenter said. "At 5:30 a.m. a few weeks ago, I was gifted these lyrics. I thank God for my musical gifts and these lyrics in hope they will give the world peace."

"This mid-tempo, power anthem is reflective of the chaos and turmoil going on in this world today. But this song offers hope. Listeners will immediately be able to identify with the message," Nashville hit writer, Thornton Cline said.

The song has received rave music reviews.

"It's difficult, if not outright impossible, to dislike Billy Gaines' "There Will Come a Day", " says Daily Pop News.

"Billy Gaines has hit upon just the right presentation for this single and I'm grateful to hear its message when the world seems to get crazier every day," said Indie Music Review.
