CAMPBELL, CA, UNITED STATES, May 11, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Thousands of Ukrainians have been wounded, at least 300 of those children, in Russia's invasion of Ukraine.

I jumped at the opportunity," Dr. Zeidler said. "I had this storage unit full of medical supplies that we had stocked up throughout COVID."

When Dr. Kamakshi Zeidler of Aesthetx heard her Ukrainian-born nurse ask to donate her paycheck in exchange for medical supplies to send back home, she knew she wanted to do more. "I jumped at the opportunity," Dr. Zeidler said. "I had this storage unit full of medical supplies that we had stocked up throughout COVID." Aesthetx is a fully integrated plastic surgery, dermatology and aesthetic medicine practice with a state of the art surgical suite on site. A majority of the supplies are items to perform surgery, like IV fluids and other surgical items, which will be delivered directly to hospitals, orphanages and shelters.

The nurse, Oleksandra (Sasha) Moseychuk, grew up in Ukraine and came to the United States after high school. Her mother-in-law happened to be visiting at the time the war started and has not been able to return home to her husband since.

Moseychuk has been working with a local grassroots organization Hearts for Ukraine gathering donations since the start of the war. The group's founder Eugene Tarasov, who once lived in Ukraine, is a music festival organizer putting his skills to use, synthesizing the Ukrainian needs and managing the collection and delivery of the goods.
