“We are extremely lucky to have these phenomenal artists step forward to participate in this very special 2022 International Drum Month campaign,” says PMC Executive Director Antoinette Follett. “We wanted to create an educational opportunity for drummers to learn from and experience a private online lesson with some of the industry’s most respected players.”

A recent survey estimated that around one million adults took up a musical instrument as a way to cope during the pandemic. As the fourth most popular instrument to play, many people began playing drums. Though Covid restrictions have eased, people have become more familiar with online teaching technology used for live lessons. Even with a simple video chat, the audio quality is good enough, and you can hear what someone is playing on an instrument. It's not too different from a face-to-face lesson.
