As an agency, I really love Menterprise's ability to not only gather relevant and pertinent content but allows me to generate thousands of variations! Menterprise is my go-to for content creation.”

Todd Weeks - Director of Operations | 2Surge Marketing

While creating content might be easy for some people but producing high-quality content, and that too consistently, can be a challenge for most business owners who are managing a website, web store, or function as vendors on eCommerce platforms like Amazon or eBay. Whether it is a brand owner who wants to explain what makes the services or products unique or a web store owner who has a pile-up of inventories that need a great product description copy, the challenge is somewhat similar—how to produce engaging content every day while maintaining quality control and without overwhelming the business costs?

The constant need to churn original content can be stressful for young businesses, bootstrapped startups, and vendors who have seasonal content demands. Many try outsourcing their requirements and while hiring offshore resources for content generation tasks is not new, there are some dynamics about working with a remote resource that many business owners might not realize. For starters, there can be a waiting period, creating a problem when someone needs a brand portfolio to be put together within a deadline. Brand owners who want their content to be very emotive might struggle with offshore writers who cannot deliver that touch of personalization to hundreds of brand copies they create in a month.

There is also a sense of less control when offshore writing teams are integrated into a business. Often the first drafts are not good enough and need revisions, and often the business owner or the marketing team might need to repeatedly scan and revisit the copy to ensure the remote content developer understands the desired tone and expression. For many, these issues of low productivity and inefficiency can be serious. More so, when the content deliveries are meant to fuel content marketing efforts, things can take an even more acute form when the content pieces awaited are a part of an editorial calendar or a paid online branding or advertising campaign.

The Menterprise article generator software provides a solution for such issues. It presents no waiting period as the desired content is delivered within minutes. It is a sensible investment for businesses that don't have the financial leverage to hire in-house writers or offshore writing teams. The software functions using natural language process techniques which means that every piece of content it delivers is unique and readable. While some article generation tools manufacture content, rewrite it without context, and often demand proxies and captcha for the setup, Menterprise creates content that is equally relevant for browsers and search engines.

There is another unaddressed question even if a business manages to hire a dedicated writer—can every writer handle all types of content creation requirements? Sometimes, website administrators want a highly optimized, recreation of some web pages to raise the indexing probability of their websites. Marketing teams might want big landing pages with lots of FAQs across the copy. SEO teams might demand to repurpose and updating existing editorial pieces in bulk. From blogs to articles, from how-to guides to long-form content that averages more than 2,000 words, the diversity of content is not easy to handle for every writer.

Menterprise can take away these delays and frustrations associated with content development. To make things easier, it also provides the option of setting up automatic publishing schedules. And not just brand owners, even content publishers can use Menterprise for creating genuine content with many options that help to add a layer of customization to the copy.

While many marketers will agree content marketing ROI is a slow burn, there is no denying the need for high-quality but smartly optimized content. The role of keywords in plagiarism-free content cannot be argued. While some copywriters might be great at creating essays and well-researched articles, they might struggle to smartly optimize the content. This makes the content less efficient, and less likely to contribute to the ranking performance that content marketer's chase.

In comparison, the Menterprise article generation software has an inbuilt mechanism to use keywords as an inspiration, and while doing so, it ensures that the content is easy to understand rather than being stuffed with keywords. The Menterprise platform has been approved and verified by Google and the content has a high probability of ranking for the targeted keywords. Often referred to as an article writing software or a blog article maker, it generates content using the writing style and presentation that global search engines like Google prefer.

“I have searched 10 years for a tool like Menterprise. It truly is a great asset when it comes to researching topics & generating content for our projects. From day 1 it has reduced our content development costs. The Menterprise crew has been awesome. Well done guys - Love it.”
Matt Da Cruz [CEO, Network Empire Group]

Unlike some article generation platforms, Menterprise has a near-zero setup without any VPS or API keys. The user merely needs to enter the keywords or targeted phrases that can include questions or long-tail words. The second step involves creating a few headers and choosing some images & videos that are easy to import from the inbuilt library, and lastly, the user has to define the word count. Then, Menterprise takes over, automating the entire content creation and delivery process.
