The anti-fog coatings market consists of sales of anti-fog coatings by entities (organizations, sole traders, and partnerships) that are used in the application for inhibiting the condensation of the water and preventing fogging on the surface. These are used to reduce glare, improve transmission, and enhance durability and abrasion resistance. The anti-fog coating is applicable on the products such as dive masks, goggles, car windows, bathroom back-painted glasses, kitchen backsplash, and other various applications.

Global Antifog Coatings Market Trends

Technological advancements have emerged as a key trend gaining popularity in the anti-fog coatings market. According to the antifog coatings market research, major companies are focused on developing new technological solutions to reinforce their position. For example, in August 2020, NEI Corporation, a US-based company that manufactures nanotechnology-based protective and functional coatings launched NANOMYTE SAF-200, a fast-curing, long-lasting anti-fog coating with exceptional water resistance. The new coating technology is built on NANOMYTE SR-100, a revolutionary scratch-resistant transparent coating developed by NEI Corporation. The scratch-resistant base coating composition has been enhanced with novel amphiphilic chemicals
