“I'm excited to host the U.S. Mayoral Roundtable with George Burciaga and Ignite Cities and help support a revival of the collaborative spirit that mayors rely on to help everyone in their communities, regardless of politics. It's an honor and privilege to lead so many critical topics with so many powerful city leaders through these sessions,” said Mayor Michael B. Hancock of Denver.

“Given the challenges that we've faced in 2021 and continue to face, our natural growth within cities requires us to think bigger. The roundtable will expand its platform, including international mayors, a podcast, and new partnerships that focus on replicating innovation across all cities, so all communities have an equal opportunity to succeed,” said George Burciaga of Ignite Cities.

In 2021, the roundtable had 350 mayors attend, with over 2,000 city leaders engaged. The roundtable conversations have inspired many to reimagine while working together to transform our cities. The 2022 U.S. Mayoral Roundtable sessions will include powerful discussions around city transformations, eliminating social divides, and strengthening digital equity. These topics will include infrastructure, transportation, broadband, critical benefit distribution, equity, and climate change.
