veteran who became the founder. Having fulfilled the responsibilities of military service in defense of the country, the step after that was to move from defense to growth, specifically in the economy. This would be done by helping companies find the clients and customers that were the pillar of any meaningful business growth. The company formed from a humble start-up but steadily grew in scope and stature until it now boasts a staff with over 50 years of combined industry experience in the marketing sector.

Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Marketing chose direct mail as its entry point into the marketing sector. At the time, traditional, “analog” marketing techniques like television and print advertising were still the dominant forces, but digital marketing, despite being new, was already showing a lot of potentials. Working in direct mail proved a fortuitous decision, as it imparted critical lessons about data acquisition, management, and analytics that would prove crucial and transferable. When digital marketing emerged as a powerful new promotional tool, Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Marketing had the experience of quickly integrating and offering it as a new service, enjoying an early mover advantage with benefits for both the company and the clients served.

When the company started operations, the initial service range was only the hometown of Las Vegas, Nevada. Today, the company provides marketing coverage for the United States, including Alaska and Hawaii. Those clients that want to operate throughout North America can take advantage of databases covering the markets in Canada and Mexico. And for businesses that are ready to go international, marketing assistance across the Atlantic is available with databases for European Union markets like France.

Ironically, the current business climate for cannabis is where the United States is playing catch up due to the legal environment, though this is steadily changing. Uruguay was the first country to legalize marijuana at the national/federal level. However, our northern neighbor, Canada, became the second nation and first First-World country to do the same thing. This has still not yet happened in the United States, where Federal law still views cannabis and its related products as controlled but has also opened the doors to state-level legality.

The result of this is that some states still maintain marijuana as an illegal substance, while others have declared it legal for medical usage. Still, other states have gone as far as Canada and said it is legal for recreational use, but with similar restrictions to alcohol or tobacco products. This has created a vast range of different marijuana products, such as the now rapidly emerging market of CBD—a derivative of cannabis, for pain, anxiety, and even depression management. On the other hand, organic marijuana and even THC products, the marijuana derivative responsible for psychotropic properties, are sold recreationally as edibles, extracts, and associated accessories. The marijuana dispensary and head shop market in the United States is in infancy, meaning everything from financial services to construction benefits as the industry grows.

A Growing Demographic Range

As marijuana dispensaries and head shop owners spread throughout different states, various marketing opportunities present themselves for those that can reach out to these businesses. Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Marketing is ready with marijuana dispensary and head shop owner lists that can put companies in touch with the right interests and focus.

Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Marketing also has contacts based on geographic needs. The databases have been collected, maintained, and verified to ensure legitimacy, currency, and activity. All the contact details are verified by telephone to ensure they are valid and valuable.

The listings for marijuana dispensary and head shop owners are available across specific territorial needs, for nationwide coverage, or focusing on a particular region, like only the Pacific Northwest, or a specific state, such as California, right down to specific cities or even neighborhoods. For example, targeting only relevant businesses in the Venice Beach area is possible.

Different marketing strategies may require further details, which can be provided based on the requirements of the marketing campaign. Mailing addresses are a standard inclusion, but email addresses are always ready for any digital marketing needs. Telephone numbers can also be provided for businesses interested in telemarketing, and even cellular numbers for SMS/Text-based marketing techniques are available if there is a need.

Businesses interested in managing a direct mail campaign but reluctant to do so because of a lack of experience can try turnkey direct mail solutions. This is a guided experience where every step occurs under one roof, from the concept and planning to manufacture materials and distribution. This also eliminates the usual requirement of vetting vendors individually for different stages.
