Columbia-based behavioral therapy center helping children realize their potential beyond physical and cognitive limits, has announced its Summer Camp and Family Day services for 2022. The summer camp will run from May through August and offer free events and activities for students with an autism waiver.

We are pleased to offer our summer camp again, giving even more children the opportunity to participate in engaging programming while also giving them access to much-needed therapeutic services.”

Soaring Stars’ summer 2022 services will serve families in Montgomery, Prince George’s, Howard, Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Charles, and Queen Anne counties at its Columbia-based location. In addition to a full slate of fun events and activities dubbed Super Star Days that include face painting, puppet shows, dancing, clowns and more, Soaring Stars’ summer camp offers autism waiver families therapeutic integration, respite care, intensive individual support services and family consultations.

“Our first annual Summer Camp and Family Day was a success. We were filled to capacity and got resoundingly positive reviews from the families and children taking part in our special summer services,” said Sharon Williams-Newton, owner of Soaring Stars. “We are pleased to offer our summer camp again this summer, giving even more children the opportunity to participate in engaging activities while also giving them access to much-needed therapeutic services. Spaces fill up quickly, so interested families should reach out to secure their spots."

In addition to its summer camp, Soaring Stars offers year-round support for children with autism waivers and their families through appointment-based care and counseling.
