

Super Chill Products Advise Safe Recreation With Hemp-derived THC-O

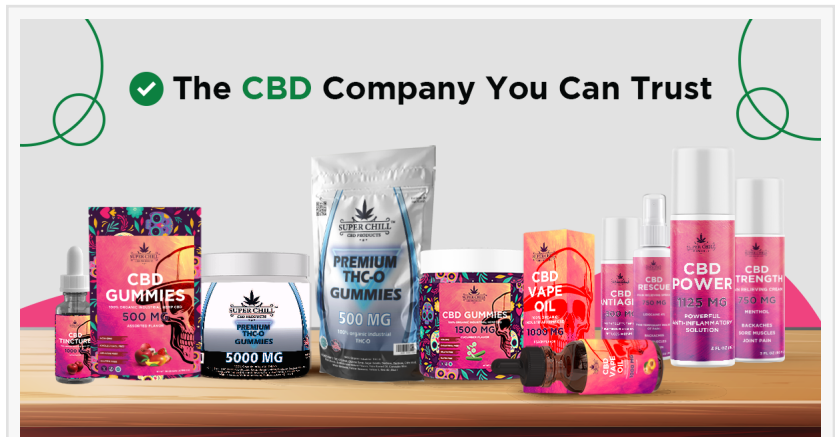

Valuable points on safe and sustainable usage of THC-O edibles

NEW YORK, NEW YORK, UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, May 27, 2022

/EINPresswire.com/ -- The market for CBD (cannabidiol) health products has matured and diversified over time with consumers realizing several potential health benefits. Following suit, there is a new entrant in the market called THC-O (or ATHC) which is a synthesized variety of THC (tetrahydrocannabinol) offering a range of recreational and medicinal use cases.

Super Chill CBD Products has recently launched THC-O offerings such as gummies and vape cartridges, derived from natural US-grown hemp, backed by lab certifications. In continuation, the company has released a set of value points for getting the most out of THC-O products while ensuring safety.

The class of THC-O products resembles Delta-8 Tetrahydrocannabinol \(THC\) products, which are known to be psychoactive in nature. THC-O is acetylated, hence, it offers a balanced psychoactive experience to the users. The company's experts advised, "the best outcomes of THC-O can be obtained with gradual and moderated usage. Users should refrain from overconsumption, and enjoy the products with patience.”

The company also added that THC-O products are suitable for recreational purposes while also depicting potent medical uses for calming anxiety and enabling healthy sleep. For sustainable usage, the company recommends starting with a lower dosage and progressively increasing it until desired effects are achieved. Users should keep a close watch on their bodily response to THC-O for knowing the best dosage for themselves.

Without making bold claims, the company spokesperson highlighted how they have received a gratifying response for their initial set of products. “We aim to create a safe and responsive environment for our customers and CBD/THC users at large.”, the correspondent added.
