The welding consumables market consists of sales of welding consumables by entities (organization, partnership, sole traders) that are used to join the thermoplastics and metals utilizing coalescence. These are used in different applications to make them a final product in different industries. A welding consumable produces a fume composition that contains 14% chromium as Cr (III) and it is over alloyed with 2–4% Ni to encourage the formation of austenite in the weld metal and to maintain the phase balance.
