Growing special designation from regulatory authorities is a major factor fostering the growth of the market. Rising expenditure on the development of healthcare infrastructure, growing public awareness about the disease in developing regions, increase in the initiatives by the government to promote awareness in the backward areas, and upsurge in the strategic collaboration rate among the market players are other factors also fostering the growth of the market. Surging demand for personalized drugs and affordable diagnostics tests is other determinant that will create lucrative market growth opportunities.

However, dearth of skilled medical professionals and unfavourable reimbursement scenario in the developing and under developed economies will pose a major challenge to the market growth. Also, high costs associated with research and development proficiencies, rising cost treatment and drugs still yet to be approved by the specific authorities and poor healthcare facilities in the underdeveloped economies will further derail the market growth rate.
