Grassroots

Engineers of Tomorrow believe to experience a real impact, it all starts at the roots. For them, it means their volunteers. Real engineers working in several communities to help solve local problems. Engineers of Tomorrow empower them to be ambassadors, role models, and change makers.

Systemic

Quoted by The Pineapple Theory: "Aren't no magic bean!" Engineers of Tomorrow understands that culture change doesn't happen overnight. There're in this for the long haul, and so are their volunteers. Engineers of Tomorrow programs are strategically designed to create strong connections between communities and education.

Turn research into action

Engineers of Tomorrow train their volunteers to deliver world-class STEM outreach to a diverse audience in an inclusive way. They work with social scientists who study the best ways to do this.
