The Red Winter is Coming, Will Baird, from Shawline Publishing, Sits Down with Author Paul Rushworth-Brown

A dark and dramatic prose of love, family and war that brings the realism of history to you imagination with little effort...a great read!

NEW YORK CITY, NEW YORK, UNITED STATES, May 22, 2022 / EINPresswire.com/ -- AN EXCERPT FROM RED WINTER JOURNEY

Thomas placed a penny on the bar, "Ales, barkeep." He turned around, shocked by the wrinkled face that was bent over before him, her whispery white hair poking through the sides of her wimple. Deep wrinkles in her face spread like a roadmap, her left eye almost moonlike with its colour and sadness. A reminder of the poor

He had felt the pangs of hunger and would not wish it on any other, "Here, take this and be off with you, feed yer bairns or more likely yer 'usband that has no more work left in him."

She lifted her trembling hand, which was wrapped in a dirty, small woollen mitten with the fingers cut at the knuckles. Thomas placed two pennies in her palm

"Would I or any man do less for a mother? For it is a wicked man that spurns an old woman." Then he thought about his own mother, and it saddened him.

Modern writers usually don't know what it was like to live in the past but Rushworth-Brown has done this with great skill in haunted by those words.  $\textbf{this accomplished, atmospheric} \\ \textbf{Beautiful winter backdrops and compelling action will play out}$ and thoughtful novel"

William, never the brightest of the two brothers, looked puzzled "Why'd ya' do that, Thomas?"

Thomas smiled, "There's some in the world far worse off than we brother, and one good turn deserves another. One good turn deserves another.' Thomas would one day be before you as you are transported back in time. You will laugh. - US National Times
