The Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Origin

Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Marketing owes its start to the dream of a disabled veteran. Having served in the military and completed all obligations, the next step was to move away from defense and focus on growth. In this case, change meant helping American businesses expand by increasing their ability to find and retain customers or clients. A small start-up was formed to pursue this goal, and today that company proudly boasts a staff with a combined total of over 50 years of industry experience in the marketing field.

Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Marketing made its first foray into marketing before a paradigm shift. The older analog techniques, like television and radio advertising, still dominated the industry, but digital was already making waves that people anticipated would grow. The company's initial focus was on direct mail marketing, which had the excellent effect of imparting crucial lessons in data acquisition, management, and analytics. When, as predicted by some, digital proved to be a significant marketing force, the company was well-positioned to integrate digital marketing into its repertoire of services for an early mover advantage. This led to substantial gains for both the company and its clients.

Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Marketing initially only serviced its hometown of Las Vegas, Nevada. Now it covers all of the United States, including Alaska and Hawaii. There's also North American coverage with databases for Canada and Mexico. Companies ready to go international can use databases to cross the Atlantic and enter European Union markets like France.

A Time For Patriots

Because a disabled veteran created Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Marketing, there is enormous respect and awareness for the veterans of the war in the United States. Throughout the last several generations, brave American men and women have either answered the call of duty when conscription was invoked or, during times of peace, have taken it upon themselves to put on a uniform and fight to defend the rule of law and democratic values throughout the world.

Veterans come from all walks of life in America, with different ethnicities, religious faiths, and economic classes coming together for a common cause of protecting the country they grew up in. This creates a wide-ranging demographic that still has one common driving factor: the experience of having served the country. However, different backgrounds and interests are beneath that common cause, creating many business and marketing opportunities or charitable causes for the proper organization.

Veterans have varied interests and needs. Some veterans who may be injured or disabled will be interested in products or services to help cope with disabilities. Other veterans may be interested in charitable causes to help those in countries they may have served in or provide aid to those countries currently in a military conflict, such as Ukraine. Other veterans may be interested in personal development after completing their tours of duty and be receptive to developmental products or services that help further education in academics, trades, or other studies that open up new options for life after military service. Some veterans may want help, while others wish to new paths; it's just matching the right product or service.

Getting In Touch

Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Marketing has comprehensive database listings of veterans from war all over the United States. These databases will accommodate any geographic requirements. While nationwide marketing can be furnished for the highest number of leads, this can also narrow to a regional focus, such as only veterans in the New England area. It can also target single states and even specific neighborhoods in towns or cities, such as only veterans in Brooklyn, New York City.

Databases can also be provided according to more specific demographic breakdowns. Veteran-related services targeting only Italian Americans can be provided. A veteran-related appeal to only practicing Christian veterans is available if required. Even financial metrics can specifically target veterans ranked in the middle class. These lists include critical contact data like mailing addresses, but further details can be included to suit other marketing needs. Email addresses for digital marketing are available, telephone numbers for telemarketing can be given, and cellular numbers for text/SMS-based marketing can be provided based on a marketing strategy's needs.

Some companies may be interested in hands-on direct mail campaign management but feel reluctant due to a lack of experience. There are turnkey direct mail solutions to address this. These special services take clients through every step of the immediate mail process with guidance. From concept and design, then manufacturing and printing, and finally distribution using the required databases. It all takes place under one roof, eliminating the need to individually source and vet vendors as is usual for this process.
