Big Girl Banger

went viral on TikTok over the last three months, growing his account over half a million followers in as much time. “Big Girl Banger” has created a splash since its release, and most recently reached as high as top 50 in a UK chart on YouTube Music.

Robbie Tripp, formerly of “curvy wife guy” fame, has established himself as a legitimate rising artist, collaborating with artists such as Grammy Award-winning rap producer Jahlil Beats and rapper/internet icon RiFF RAFF. Tripp has used his fun and upbeat music, as well as his social platforms, as a means of shining a light on body positivity and the need for size inclusivity not only in the music industry but throughout society.

“Big Girl Banger” has resulted in a flood of positive comments on Tripp’s TikTok and YouTube channel, as listeners from around the globe dive into his music and videos that are inspiring women to love themselves and be confident. This new single is the type of music that helps cultivate change with its catchy melody and creative, winking wordplay.

This music is inspired by the eccentric artist’s beautiful curvy wife Sarah Tripp, the successful luxury blogger of Sassy Red Lipstick. Previously, Tripp was known for his viral single ‘Chubby Sexy’, his first body-positive anthem that was highlighted as a ‘Moment of the Year’ in GQ Magazine’s annual Men of the Year issue.

With his upbeat and positive “confidence music”, Tripp showcases his signature lyricism and “Desert Money” style. The rising star has been profiled in The New York Times, GQ, Men’s Health, E! News, NYLON, and more. The singer’s music has earned him co-signs from hip hop heavyweights such as RiFF RAFF (Jody Highroller), Blocboy JB, Dizzy Wright, and Grammy Award-winning producer Jahlil Beats.
