The group announced that from November 11th-16th the pageant will be held at a luxury hotel in Miami bringing candidates and beauty queens from across 5 continents for the chance of being crowned the next Miss Teen Universe.

Candidates for the national U.S. Miss Teen Universe pageant will also be participating in a pageant this summer according to the organization's director of national pageants, Bibyana Marquez, who was also Miss Teen universe 2020, where they will compete to be crowned the widely sought-after title of Miss Teen Universe USA.

For the November pageant, girls aged between 15-21 will take part coming from all over the world from countries including; The Philippines, Mexico and Brazil among dozens others.

According to 2020's winner, Bibyana Marquez; 'Winning the Miss Teen Universe title not only grants a prestigious crown and accolade, but successful winners will also engage in various activities from charity work to photo shoots, magazine features, press interviews and much more to help inspire future candidates and spread the positive and motivational message of the pageant'.

The November pageant is also set to be filmed for a 24 Fashion TV show which will air on Amazon and Roku TV to its huge global audience. The show is set to follow the preparations leading up to the grand finale, the various activities of the pageant from catwalk shows, a trip to Disneyland, evening gown presentations and elocution and communication skills. Celebrity guest judges and mentors will also be preceding over the pageant including Women's Empowerment Public Speaker Aliia Roza and the pageant's Director of Public Relations, Oli London and will join other celebrity guests judges who will be announced at a later date.

More details for the upcoming pageant will be announced this summer on Miss Teen Universe's official website and Instagram. The TV show following the pageant is also set to be the first ever major TV show in reality show format at a teen pageant and will air later this year.
