When attending a live classical concert, “you come in one way,” Gaylin explained. He appreciates the power of music to “deepen human concerns, express them and navigate resounding responses.” I think of this 40th anniversary concert season as Questions and Responses, where we give voice to sempiternal dilemmas and challenges that are nonetheless so specific to our time; and in each program we return with powerful, affirming responses.”

Season subscriptions will be available this month. Single concert ticket sales start in September. Subscription and full details on the season programs are available on the Bay Atlantic Symphony website, www.bayatlanticsymphony.org.
