emerging growth opportunities in the business sphere that are anticipated to bolster the growth of the market. This steady revenue growth can be attributed to rising government initiatives to support green building installation, a shift in consumer preference for long-lasting color coatings, rising energy consumption, and rising global warming, all of which has boosted the market's adoption of cool roof coatings. This trend is expected to continue during the forecast period.

Cool roof coatings include reflecting tiles, sheet coverings, and protective coatings that allow roofs to stay cooler, lowering building temperatures. Roofs are painted by white coatings or specific reflective pigments that reflect sunlight and protect surfaces from Ultraviolet (UV) rays, water corrosion, and chemical damage. Rising demand for energy savings and favorable government regulations regarding tax incentives, stimulate the need for green construction materials.
