AITX Nationwide Television Ad Campaign Beginning in Late May.

AITX announced that its wholly owned subsidiary Robotic Assistance Devices, Inc. (RAD) has received notice from a top dealer to expect an order for a minimum of 37 RAD devices. This will be the Company's largest unit order through an authorized dealer. The dealer and the corporate end user are not being identified at this time due to non-disclosure agreements. The order is for a minimum of 37 units which are a mix of ROSA and AVA security robots.

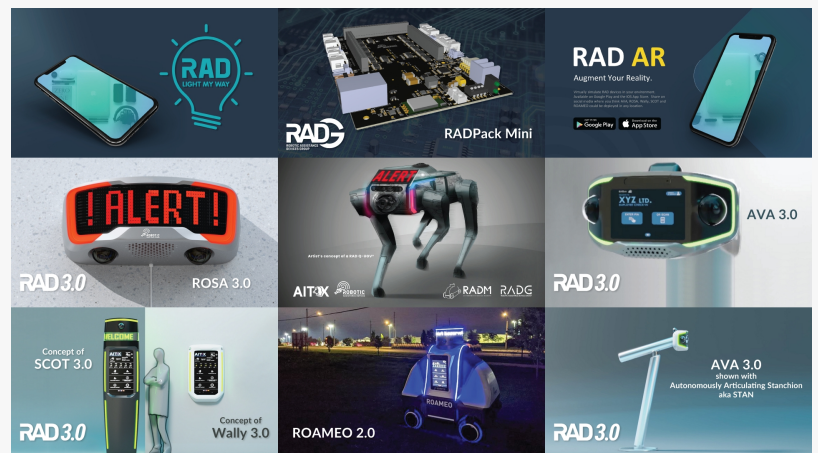

The Company noted that it may release additional information on the dealer and the end user at a later date. The end user is a global leader in the transportation manufacturing industry with a presence in over 60 countries. RAD devices will be used at 5 of the end user's manufacturing, service, and distribution centers. The end user is undergoing a modernization of their entire guarding and security profile.

"This dealer is building on their success with RAD in similar, albeit smaller, deployments. This order shows our company's ability to deliver, maintain and grow solutions that work and provide strong ROI to dealers and end users," said Mark Folmer, president of RAD. "The impetus for corporate end users to fill unfillable human roles while reducing cost is increasing in urgency. This order is expected to save the client millions of dollars a year while improving their safety and security profile."

"This incredible order is one of many coming to the end of the sales cycle," said Steve Reinharz, CEO of AITX and RAD. "I expect these types of multi-unit sale announcements to be more
