Global Surgical Staplers Market Analysis and Size

The rise in the concerns regarding the healing of traditional sutures is supporting the development of surgical stapling devices. Modern surgical staplers are known to be less prone to leak and separation compared to sutures.

Surgical staplers refer to the specialized staplers that are utilized in surgery for joining, closing and removing parts of the bowels or lungs. Staplers are preferred over sutures as these are faster, consistent, easier, and accurate to use than hand sutures. Modern surgical staplers are made of plastic or stainless steel.

COVID-19 Impact on Surgical Staplers Market

COVID-19 had a negative impact on the surgical staplers market owing to the decline in elective surgeries. Hospital access was restricted to non-essential care, and O&P clinics were temporarily closed during the pandemic. The implementation of social distancing, lockdown of the population and limited access to clinics greatly affected the market. The slow-down in patient flow and referrals, and decline in trauma and workplace injuries also impacted the market growth. However, market will resume its growth in the post-pandemic due to the easing in restrictions that were imposed earlier.

Recent Development

Baxter International Inc. launched a new generation of its Peri-Strips Dry with the Veritas Collagen Matrix (PSDV) product in February'2020. The product is also known as PSDV that comes with a secure grip for reliable staple line reinforcement in surgical procedures
