Hospice of Davidson County Partners with DuBose Web Group to Launch a New Website with Easy Patient Referrals and Accessible Hospice Care Resources

LEXINGTON, NORTH CAROLINA, UNITED STATES, June 16, 2022

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Hospice of Davidson County recently celebrated the launch of their brand new website it designed in partnership with DuBose Web Group. Hospice of Davidson County's goal was to create a modern, user-friendly experience with elevated branding and informative messaging that resonated with its core audiences.

Hospice of Davidson County Website Provides Educational Resources and Simplified Access

The new website aims to streamline patient referrals while providing education on hospice care services, programs, and levels of care. A referral can be made by anyone, but prior to receiving care, a patient's physician must deem the patient hospice appropriate. Referrals can be made by calling (336) 475-5444. Users can also request more information via the online contact form.

CEO, Laura Owen

Beyond information on its services and programs, Hospice of Davidson County offers resources including a blog, podcast, and community education opportunities. The Community Connections Podcast is hosted by Digital Health Program Manager Cole Warner and Medical Social Worker Emmalee Thomas. New episodes are released weekly on Spotify, Apple Podcasts, and Google Podcasts. Users are also able to listen to the podcast on the website.

Accessibility and usability were key factors that influenced the design of the website. A simple navigation, mobile-friendly experience, and the language selector tool that allows users to choose from 10 different languages are just a few of the accessibility features implemented.
