"We presented to a DSI gathering just a few weeks ago and their reps were very enthusiastic about RAD. They indicated that several big opportunities were on the horizon and ready to pop," said Mark Folmer, president of RAD. "Just about all of their corporate clients are filling the hole created by employment vacancies with automation. I expect that this is just the tip of the

“If you’re going to take thirty-seven units, you might as well make it an even fifty,” said Steve Reinharz, CEO of AITX and RAD. “Our sales pipeline has significantly more multi-unit opportunities than single unit deals. I think we’ve moved past the ‘fear of being first’, and we’re well into the ‘fear of missing out’, especially when RAD can save companies millions of dollars like we’re doing with this order from DSI.”
